About the workshop

Environmental, social and governance (ESG) considerations are becoming increasingly important for governments in many countries. Concern from citizens about environmental standards, social justice, corporate responsibility and sustainability is driving leaders and managers in the public, private and non-government sector to respond positively to growing ESG requirements. Organisations without effective ESG strategies fully integrated into their ethics, strategies, and operating practices will face increasing pressure and difficulties.

The Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) have set a demanding agenda for governments. There are regulations and international standards that require governments, organisations and individuals to take and demonstrate that they are taking appropriate actions. Reporting requirements have been introduced and are being further developed for the public and private sectors. ESG reporting requirements have been or are being developed. The International Financial Reporting Standards (IFRS) and International Public Sector Account Standards (IPSAS) are actively developing sustainability standards for application to the public sector. This creates a further imperative for the development of effective ESG financial strategies.

Senior managers and finance practitioners need to have a broad appreciation of the issues that their organisations face in terms of their net zero, Nationally Defined Contributions (NDC) and broader ESG goals. This is now an urgent issue that must be tackled.

Our Environment, Social, and Governance (ESG) workshop focuses on helping you develop policy, economic, financial and sustainability strategies that are coherent and targeted in this fast-transitioning field. The sessions, discussions and practical case studies covered will enable you to relate the briefings and materials to your needs and align the learning with planning your next steps for implementing ESG in your organisation.

We will examine why sustainable ethics matter and how practitioners are adapting to this fast-moving situation. We evaluate why significant resources are being devoted to reporting and assurance on environmental, social, and governance issues throughout the public and private sectors. We will explore the different impacts of ESG in the developed and developing worlds, the role of donor partners and the prospects for commitments made at Communities of Practice (COPs) to be put into practice.

The workshop will focus on:

- The big picture, managing corporate resources sustainably - best practice approaches to supply chain management, budget setting, and a monitoring process that enables timely remedial action when things go wrong
- Ensuring the ESG transition becomes central in public and private sector corporate governance and in achieving strategic objectives
- Optimising the opportunities presented by technological innovation to transform the whole sustainable agenda in the public interest
- The adoption as individuals and linkages between politicians, donors, managers, and professionals (lawyers, accountants, and auditors) in ESG
- Reporting consistently in line with the latest international standards.

Who is the workshop for?

The workshop is designed for lawyers, accountants, policymakers, financial practitioners, line managers, and politicians with ESG responsibilities and those with an interest in implementing sustainable solutions.

How participants will benefit

The workshop will enable you to:

- Incorporate ethical and holistic sustainable development into financial strategies and operations
- Implement stable planning frameworks for sustainability
- Understand the role of politicians, donors, managers, and professionals (lawyers, accountants, and auditors) in ESG
- More effectively support Management Boards and the political/managerial processes
- Appreciate the social and corporate governance implications of better management of resources
- Use professional accounting and audit techniques to inform then plan for a sustainable future
- Link sustainability to risk management, performance management, and resource allocation
- Understand the principles, challenges, and benefits of International Sustainability Accounting and Auditing Standards (and associated guidance)
- Understand the sustainability requirements of donor partners.

What the workshop will cover

During the week you will learn about:

- The key elements of good practice in sustainability: ESG
- The implications of the Sustainable Development Goals
- How to develop sustainable strategies for you as a practitioner and for your organisation
- Integrating ESG factors into effective supply chain management and procurement including with respect to PPPs
- Financial implications of environmental, social, and governance (ESG) factors
